Good News Friday

Dear Patriots,

There is good news leaking out all over the place. The left no longer seems to be able to control the narrative.

Read all about it!

The Federal Government Admits: Voting Machines Can Be Hacked!

QUOTE: The Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Agency (CISA) is forced to admit that Dominion Voting System machines in 16 states are "vulnerable to hacking"

President Trump blasted out my Substack article "Something Stinks in Georgia" (120,000 page views and climbing!) to his followers on TruthSocial yesterday — and it sent Biden's unpaid staff in the media into a frenzy. Discredited media outlets for beta-males and aging hippies like Rolling Stone, The Daily Beast, CNN, MSDNC, Newsweek, and Politico all published articles in a foolish attempt to dismiss my piece.

They tried to do the same thing on Twitter. The smallest Australian export to America since the koala bear, Axios' Jonathan Swan even retweeted Trump's post with a snide remark. Swan is mostly known for spending his time at the Bombay Club (one block north of the White House) plying the reprehensible Alyssa Farah with cocktails in exchange for gossip about the Trump Administration. Among journalists, Swan is even more famous for being dumb enough to marry Betsy Woodruff, whose semi-regular and totally unhinged appearances on MSDNC from her kitchen remind me of those paid advertisements for some new medication to treat paranoid schizophrenia.

The federal government's own Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Agency has been forced to admit that it was spreading misinformation about the 2020 election being "the most secure election in history."

Are Dominion machines being used in Georgia? Yes of course — Dominion's vulnerable machines are being used in all of Georgia's counties.

So the people who told you that the voting machines could be rigged — and who were smeared as crazy conspiracy theorists by the corporate media and sued by the voting machine companies for libel— were telling the truth.

We were right.

Wisconsin Voters Sue 5 Cities Over Unlawful Unmanned Ballot Drop Boxes in Elections

QUOTE: Voters in Wisconsin's five largest cities are suing over the use of illegal unmanned absentee ballot drop boxes in elections.

Attorneys from the Thomas More Society, a nationwide public interest law firm, filed the legal complaints on May 25 on behalf of voters in Green Bay, Kenosha, Madison, Milwaukee, and Racine. Officials from the affected cities weren't immediately available for comment.

Although Wisconsin election law forbids the use of unmanned absentee ballot drop boxes for voting, those cities used them, Thomas More Society special counsel Erick Kaardal said in a statement.

"In 2020, the cities of Milwaukee, Madison, Racine, Kenosha, and Green Bay made an agreement with the nonprofit Center for Tech and Civic Life to use the drop boxes to get these cities' residents to vote," Kaardal said. "This so-called 'Wisconsin Safe Voting Plan,' involved $8.8 million of private grants to these five cities, to target specific populations to vote. It had little, if anything at all, to do with keeping voters safe from Covid-19, as it purported to do."

Facebook founder Mark Zuckerberg and his wife, Priscilla Chan, made $350 million in donations — "Zuckerbucks" or "Zuckbucks," as some have called the money—to the "Safe Elections" Project of the left-wing Center for Technology and Civic Life (CTCL). The CTCL reportedly distributed grants to more than 2,500 election offices throughout the country.

Amid a wave of controversy over the election grants, a Zuckerberg spokesman said in April that the billionaire activist will not be participating in such grants-making this year, as The Epoch Times previously reported.

California's gender quota mandate for corporate boards struck down as 'unconstitutional'

QUOTE: In a historic victory for the rule of a law, a California court has found the state's gender quota law for corporate boards unconstitutional.

This verdict comes on the heels of a similar ruling that found California's diversity mandate for corporate boards unconstitutional.

Judicial Watch filed the gender quota lawsuit in Los Angeles County Superior Court in 2019 on behalf of California taxpayers Robin Crest, Earl De Vries and Judy De Vries.

The lawsuit challenged a 2018 law, known as Senate Bill 826, which required every publicly held corporation headquartered in California to have at least one director "who self-identifies her gender as a woman" on its board of directors by December 31, 2019.

The law also required corporations to have up to three such persons on their boards by December 31, 2021, depending on the size of the board.

Judicial Watch argued that the quota for women on corporate boards violated the Equal Protection Clause of the California Constitution.

California Superior Court Judge Maureen Duffy-Lewis agreed with Judicial Watch and "determine[d] that SB 826 violates the Equal Protection Clause of the California Constitution and is thus enjoined."

The Near Mass Shooting Most of the Media Won't Tell You About

QUOTE: A woman with a concealed handgun stopped a mass shooting this week after a man attacked a graduation party in Charleston, West Virginia.

"Police said a woman who was lawfully carrying a pistol shot and killed a man who began shooting at a crowd of people Wednesday night in Charleston," location Fox 11 reported about the incident. "Dennis Butler was killed after allegedly shooting at dozens of people attending a graduation party Wednesday near the Vista View Apartment complex. No injuries were reported from those at the party. Investigators said Butler was warned about speeding in the area with children present before he left. He later returned with an AR-15-style firearm and began firing into the crowd before he was shot and killed."

Police described the woman as "running toward the threat," saving lives.

The story comes as Democrats in Washington D.C. seek to curtail self defense rights for law abiding citizens. President Biden is leading the charge.

Moderna Throwing Away 30 Million Doses of COVID Vaccine Because 'Nobody Wants Them'

QUOTE: Our betters in the World Economic Forum (WEF) gathered in Davos this week to decide what's best for the planet and everyone on it (especially themselves). But Stéphane Bancel, CEO of Moderna, was sad. He was disappointed that the plebs don't want his company's revered COVID-19 vaccines.

"It's sad to say, I'm in the process of throwing 30 million doses into the garbage, because nobody wants them," lamented Bancel as he participated in a panel discussion. "We have a big demand problem." Actually, that sounds like a big over-supply problem to me, but what do I know?

Bancel elaborated on the outreach efforts the pharma giant was making to "every country," including going around to all the embassies in Washington, D.C., to entreat governments to distribute the excess shots to their citizens. But sadly, he concluded, "nobody wants to take them."

"The challenge we have now is [a] very different situation than we had two years ago. The problem we had two years ago is there was no mRNA capacity in the world. Zero."

"The situation is very different today," explained Bancel. "Moderna has three billion doses annual capacity, Pfizer has four billion doses, that's seven billion doses, and the Chinese don't want the vaccines with mRNA. So if you just take the, just the Chinese population out, you have more than a dose per person, and as we just discussed, the issue in many countries is people don't want vaccines.

Bancel called out the ugly Americans. "In the U.S., people don't want vaccines," he said. "Around the world, we have a lot of people who don't want the vaccine," Bancel mourned, before reiterating that the problem was not a "capacity limit."

Update on yesterday's post about changing physician attitudes towards the mRNA shots

QUOTE: So many stories! It's already clear the Zeitgeist has changed and many doctors - especially pediatricians - have decided to pretend the Covid vaccines don't exist.

Yesterday's post struck a nerve.

Physicians, nurses, and patients from all over the world have already sent hundreds of stories. (Interestingly, Australia is disproportionately represented - the six-month Omicron wave there seems to have cracked confidence in the vaccines.)

I plan to look at this topic from several angles, but the change in attitudes among pediatricians is especially striking. Several factors may be driving it. The risk-benefit of these shots for kids is particularly indefensible, the approval process has hardly inspired confidence, and pediatricians know that if they push too hard they risk backlash against all vaccines.

In any case, discussion of the mRNA jabs seems simply to have disappeared at well-child visits, even in the bluest cities and states.

Tom Cruise Could Earn $200M for Non-Woke 'Top Gun' Sequel

QUOTE: Because he's still a bona fide movie star who makes movies normal people want to see, Tom Cruise could earn a record $200 million for Top Gun: Maverick, reports Celebrity Net Worth.

All this woketardery is killing more careers than we can count, many of them before they get started. Woke movies insult audiences. Woke movies lecture and talk down to their audiences. Woke movies break the storytelling spell by inserting preachy agendas and fake ideas (mostly about sexuality and gender) that violate human nature.

Cruise doesn't do that. He never has. He also protects his image—no mouthing off on social media. Everything is tightly controlled to ensure Cruise looks good and the public never tires of his presence on TV or in the tabloids. He delivers, and now he's enjoying the biggest hit of his 40-year career and, potentially, the biggest payday in Hollywood history.

Will Hollywood sit up and take notice?

Nope. Hollywood is too far gone. Woke McCarthyism rules the entertainment business, and everyone will make excuses for this success instead of reproducing it through the simple act of giving the customers a lecture-free two hours of escapism, adventure, romance, and inspiration.

Hopefully, Cruise will continue to deliver. He's so rich he can do whatever he wants.

Remember, you are not alone.

Pray. Know. Share.

Hold Fast,
